

Caribbean Journal of Philosophy, Vol. 5, No. 1, 2013

Editorial

Much is happening in the contemporary world requiring critical reflective engagement. That our users, readers, researchers and contributors have been patiently waiting for the next issue of Caribbean Journal of Philosophy, while making useful contributions by way of essays and comments indicate the level of commitment, goodwill and support that the Journal evokes in the global academy as well as within the immediate Caribbean community that we serve. For this we are grateful and we take nothing for granted; and we hope this level of support in all areas will continue. We present Vol. 5, 2013 here for your perusal. We hope to be up-to-date soon with the issues. We continue to welcome your essays, reviews, discussion notes, announcements, etc.; so, please, keep them coming and continue to be the best promoters of our (your) Caribbean Journal of Philosophy.
